India Is Alerting
reserve as Border
situation Worsens

From Wire Dispatches
DELHI, Oct. 22.—The movement toward a border con-between India and Pakistan gained momentum today
an Army alerted its reservists for active duty.
Prime Minister Indira Gandhi called her cabinet and a high-level Soviet delegation arrived here for talks.
News of India said the Indian Army had called its reserve duty because of increasing Pakistani troop deployment along India's borders. The news agency also reported that the Indian Navy and Air Force have called up some categories of reservists.

The official All-India Radio said several Indian villages were shelled for five hours before dawn today from the East Pakistan district of Sylhet. It said Indian forces returned the fire.
As security precautions were tightened, officials in the northern state of Kashmir reported a state of increased readiness in areas facing Chinese-occupied territory as well as along the border and cease-fire line with Pakistan.

Defense Ministry sources said about 600,000 members of India's Territorial (Reservist) Army had been alerted to be ready to report for duty at the "shortest notice."

Government sources said the cabinet met for almost two hours
today to review the defense situation in preparation for Mrs.
Gandhi's departure Sunday on a 19-day official trip to Western countries.

The Press Trust of India news agency said that four Pakistani air Force jets today strafed several East Pakistani border villages, causing heavy casualties in the Qasba area of Comilla district.
Quoting reliable reports reaching the remote eastern Indian town of Agartala, the agency said that there were heavy casualties among the civilian population of Khandia, Kharua and Mandaphat villages.

Meanwhile, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Nikolai Fyodorov arrived here with four other Russian officials. "These government sources said might last for a week."

The visit was described officially as a routine "annual" consultation in connection with the treaty of friendship and cooperation signed by the two nations
Aug. 8.

New taxes were announced by the government today to help defray costs imposed on the nation by the presence of an estimated nine million refugees from East Pakistan.

The taxes are to take effect
Nov. 15 as a temporary measure.
According to the government, they will yield an estimated 700 million rupees ($85 million).

The President has the power to levy such taxes when Parliament is not in session. They include a 5 percent surcharge on rail passenger fares, a 5 percent surcharge on internal air travel, a surcharge on all postal items other than postcards and registered newspapers, and an additional duty on certain financial transactions.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct.
22 (Reuters).—Secretary-General U Thant disclosed today that there had been two bombing incidents against the UN relief operation in East Pakistan.

A UN spokesman said bombs were thrown into the UN food department garage in Chittagong yesterday morning and there was a previous incident at UN premises in Dacca. A hand grenade, which failed to explode, was lobbed into the relief operation offices there.

Youth Held in Red Mission Attack

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (UPI).—
A youth described by police as a member of the Jewish Defense League was charged last night with buying a rifle used in a sniping incident at the Soviet mission to the United Nations.

Wednesday's incident, in which four shots were fired through a window of the mission into a room occupied by four children and two adults, led to bitter debate yesterday in the UN General Assembly, with Russian Ambassador Yakov Malik charging that "an unprecedented

criminal act of political nature against a foreign diplomatic mission in the United States" had been committed.

The Soviet Union protested to the United States over the snip-ing incident. Tass news agency reported in Moscow. The agency said the Soviet government had protested the "new criminal act against the U.S.S.R. representation at the United Nations in New York."

It said the note handed to U.S. Ambassador Jacob Beam said in part: "Since under generally recognized international norms
the U.S. government must insure normal conditions for functioning in the United States of institutions of the states with which it maintains diplomatic relations, the question arises whether the matter is being pushed to the point where further functioning of Soviet institutions in the United States will become impossible.

If this is so, the Soviet government will draw the necessary conclusions."

Shortly after the UN debate, a boy and a girl, both 15, slipped into the Soviet mission on Manhattan's East Side, smashed the plate-glass door and sprayed black paint inside the reception room. The teen-agers were caught by a patrolman stationed outside the mission and later released to their parents. They were not identified.

The mission has been a frequent target of protests and demonstrations, particularly by the militant JDL, which says it harasses Soviet representatives in the United States in retaliation for alleged anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union.

The youth charged with buying the .243-caliber Remington semiautomatic rifle allegedly fired from a rooftop of nearby Hunter College was identified as Isaac
M. Jaroslawicz, 18, of New York.
Police said he was "a known
member of the Jewish Defense League" and was thought to be a student.

He was charged with violating the 1968 Federal Gun Control Act by allegedly using a false draft card to purchase the weapon. Since it was a federal violation, he was turned over to federal authorities.

Mr. Jaroslawicz was freed today on $25,000 bail. Bail of $100,000 had been sought.
After the arrest of Mr. Jaros-lawicz, Mayor John V. Lindsay, whose police force is responsible for guarding the missions and delegates to the UN, said: "Let this put on notice all those potential violators of the law and of our traditional hospitality, that we will not tolerate acts of violence or hostility against the international community, and that we are determined to bring to justice those who commit such cowardly acts."

"I have written to the President several times but I got no answer," he said. "I requested meetings with him and got no answer. So my only recourse at this time is to act as an American citizen and protest in the form of picketing," he declared.

Sen. Gravel, who carried a sign that said "Mr. President: Where Do You Stand on Camikins," was accompanied by two members of the Canadian Parliament.

preparation for the President's visit as much as six months in advance is believed to have put both sides on notice to insure,
as a minimum, a period of stability in bilateral relations and to obtain, at best, a series of agreements leading up to the President's visit.

The U.S. and Its Allies: Laird Accuses NATO Nations Of Failing on Commitments...

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (WP).
—Secretary of Defense Melvin R.
Laird said today some NATO countries were using the prospect of mutual East-West troop reduction talks in Europe "as an excuse" for not carrying out improvements they pledged to make in their own armed forces.

Mr. Laird, who leaves Sunday for a two-day NATO meeting in Brussels, declined to identify those countries he was speaking about, but other Pentagon officials said the situation prevails in virtually all the member nations.

The defense chief, appearing at an impromptu Pentagon press conference, claimed that the failure of individual NATO allies to live up to their promises to improve their own defenses could weaken—perhaps more than any other factor—the allied negotiating position at the Mutual Balanced Force Reduction (MBFR) talks, which are expected to start sometime next year.

Mr. Laird seemed particularly concerned about bolstering defenses in those countries on NATO's northern and southern flanks, where Soviet air and naval strength is increasing.
These areas could also become more important under any mutual troop withdrawals, since most of the pullback would take place in Central Europe.

Mr. Laird said the U.S. defense posture in Europe, which had deteriorated in recent years as men and equipment were siphoned off for Vietnam, had now been built up to the point where U.S. ground forces now had 99.2 percent of their authorized manpower, the highest level in five years.

Mr. Laird said the United States was also improving its air and naval strength in the area.

At the NATO meeting, Mr.
Laird said that he and West German Defense Minister Helmut Schmidt will present a joint paper dealing with the question of tactical nuclear weapons in Europe. Mr. Laird stressed, however, that it would be "misleading" to infer from this that there will be any reduction in the U.S. nuclear stockpile in Europe "at this time."

Government officials say that there is, in fact, no plan to reduce the stockpile of about 7,000 tactical nuclear warheads stored in Europe.

The Laird-Schmidt paper is said to deal mostly with control over these weapons and strategy and tactics involved in their use.

But France Won't Sign Treaty

Top Reception Awaits Brezhnev

By James Goldsborough
PARIS, Oct. 22 (UPI)—Soviet party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, who will be treated as a chief of state, arrives here Monday on his first such trip to the West, during which he will try to talk the French into signing a friendship treaty.

The Champs Elysees were already lined with hammer-and-sickle banners today as the French decided to ignore titles and treat Mr. Brezhnev as the effective chief spokesman of the Soviet Union.

This red-carpet treatment, it is hoped, will make it easier to turn down the offer of the treaty. Most of these things are worked out beforehand, and Mr. Brezhnev has few doubts lingering over his chances for getting the French to sign a treaty similar to the peace, friendship and cooperation treaty the Soviet Union signed with India last August.

But he is expected to continue to push the treaty during his weeklong stay, though the final document signed is more likely to be another declaration of cooperation or protocol for consultation similar to those signed by Gen. de Gaulle in Moscow in 1966 and President Georges Pompidou in Moscow last year.

These documents have called for economic cooperation and cultural exchanges, but have no security clauses, such as the Soviet Union likes to sign with its allies, and recently signed with India.

Informed sources say that the Soviet Union was pushing so hard for a friendship treaty earlier this year that the Russians at one time threatened to cancel the Brezhnev visit and send either President Nikolai V. Podgorny or Premier Alexei N. Kosygin instead. But in the end, they backed down, having reasoned that it was time for Mr. Brezhnev to begin his exposure in the West, and that there was really no other place than France to begin.

The trip has already lost some of its gloss, principally because German Chancellor Willy Brandt made a lightning visit to the Soviet Union last month and President Nixon announced Oct. 12 that he would go to Moscow next year. The Soviet ambassador, Pyotr A. Abramov, made a special point of telling the French about the Nixon visit six days before it was announced, while the United States waited until Oct. 11 to inform the French, which was duly noted at last week's cabinet meeting.

Security Conference
Apart from the kind of document to be signed, Mr. Brezhnev and Mr. Pompidou are expected to devote considerable time to discussion of the European security conference, preparations for which, it is felt here, could begin in Helsinki next spring. The French currently envisage a six-month preparatory period in the Finnish capital, with the full conference getting under way in 1973.

Mr. Pompidou is also likely to inform Mr. Brezhnev of the chances for a Western European summit meeting among Common Market members and candidates, which is envisaged here for early next year.

Closely tied into discussions of the security conference will be the Berlin negotiations, which have stalled in their second stage with the two Germans unable to reach agreement on transit and access details. The Soviet Union is now insisting that the final Berlin agreement be signed simultaneously with the West German Bundestag's ratification of the German-Soviet friendship treaty, which has put a new snag into the procedure.

Mr. Pompidou is expected to encourage Mr. Brezhnev to use his influence with East Germany to complete the Berlin agreement in order that the security conference schedule can be kept.

Red-Carpet Treatment
Mr. Brezhnev will be the top Russian to visit here since former premier and party leader Nikita S. Khrushchev visited Gen. de Gaulle in 1960. He will be given red-carpet treatment—including a real red carpet at Orly airport. He and Mrs. Brezhnev will stay at the Grand Trianon, in Versailles, which was restored by Gen. de Gaulle for visiting statesmen.

However, reaction to his visit will not be all favorable. Despite Ambassador Abramov's meeting Wednesday with members of the French Jewish community, at least one Jewish group plans demonstrations during Mr. Brezhnev's visit. A group called the Jewish Students' Front has called for daily demonstrations to protest the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

The Interior Ministry has begun to round up persons it regards as potential demonstrators and will send them to closely watched country residences during the visit. Asked tonight, a police spokesman said the information would be made known Monday.

Police also began round-the-clock surveillance at Orly airport to make sure no bombs are planted and revealed that they had intercepted a load of 10,000 anti-Soviet leaflets that were arriving from Italy addressed to the rightist Ordre Nouveau organization.

Kosygin Curtails Montreal Tour and Goes to Vancouver

MONTREAL, Oct. 22 (Reuters)—Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin today cut short his morning program in Montreal, but he left on time for the west coast city of Vancouver.

Mr. Kosygin, whose eight-day visit in Canada has been marked by mounting anti-Soviet protests, will visit one Montreal factory instead of two as originally planned.

The official reason given was a "crowded schedule," but the 67-year-old Soviet leader was underdressed to be fired after the first half of his 25-hour visit to Montreal.

He returned to his hotel from an official dinner last night shortly before midnight, 90 minutes behind schedule.

During the night, about 2,000 Jewish demonstrators chanted "Let Our People Go" outside Mr. Kosygin's hotel.

No Incidents
A line of helmeted riot police armed with three-foot nightsticks kept the Jewish protesters across the street from the hotel here and no incidents were reported.

At about the same time, some 750 Canadians of East European origin marched on the Soviet Consulate in Montreal, but kept well away from a hotel in which Mr. Kosygin was dining with French Canadian leaders.

Signs carried by the crowd said "Red Pig Go Home," "7,000,000 Ukrainians Died in Moscow-Made Famine"—a reference to the collectivization of agriculture in the 1930s—and "Free Estonia."

Some demonstrators threw stones and paint at the gray, stone building. Others started bonfires in the street outside the consulate. At least six windows were broken and the structure was spattered with paint.

Mr. Kosygin apparently was unaware of the demonstration at the consulate as he and Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa ate a

Marijuana Held to Peril Mind, Body

GENEVA, Oct. 22 (Reuters)—A French medical expert said here yesterday that it has been proved beyond doubt that hashish and marijuana contain a poisonous substance which could harm the body and mind.

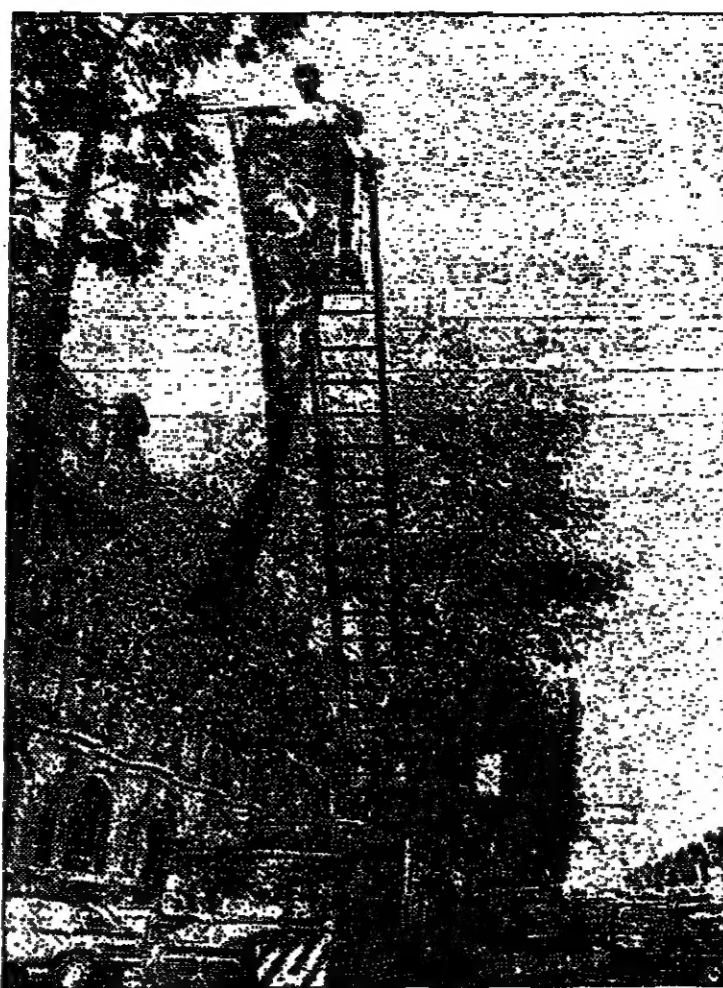

Prof. Joseph Jacob, chief of the pharmacology and toxicology department at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, told a press conference that the harmful substance, delta-9 tetrahydrocannabinol, causes abnormal behavior and a psychic dependence on the drug.

Prof. Jacob gave the press conference during a two-day conference here on the use of dependence-producing drugs organized by the World Health Organization and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Dr. Karl Evang, director general of the Norwegian Health Service, also said cannabis produces psychic dependence but added that the conference had not discussed the drug in detail.

Lithuanian Catholics Protest Lack of Religious Freedom

MOSCOW, Oct. 22 (AP)—Lithuanian Roman Catholics have taken another step in their effort to create a major protest movement against official Soviet interference in their legal right to freedom of worship.

Dissident sources reported tonight that more than 1,100 Catholics from the Lithuanian district of Aukštaitija have signed a protest statement to Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev. A copy of the statement was made available to Western correspondents.

Second Move
It is the second such action taken by Lithuanian Catholics in less than one month. Last month, about 3,000 Catholics from the district of Frenchy complained to the Communist party's Central Committee that they are denied freedom to practice their faith.

The latest protest, signed by 1,180 persons, was dated Sept. 25, just one week after the first.

Although the Catholics firmly deny that they want to form an organized movement—which would be illegal under Soviet law—it appeared that the growing Catholic awareness in Lithuania was creating a general protest movement similar to the Jewish one here.

The signatures affixed to the latest statement were different from those on the Sept. 19 letter.

Firebomb Injures Seven in Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 22 (AP)—Seven persons were injured late last night when firebombs were tossed into a bar, police said.

The incident occurred about three hours after a 3-year-old black boy was killed when struck by a Memphis police car en route to the scene of another firebombing, police said.

Fire Chief Eddie Hamilton said two women were among those injured when firebombs were hurled into the Red Lantern Lounge, a white establishment. But police inspector John Barger said he was uncertain that it was connected with racial disorders.

It was the third consecutive night of disorders in Memphis following the death of a black teen-ager almost a week ago.

cluded represented the first effort by the United States and the Soviet Union to reduce direct military friction caused by the nearness of their armed forces in many parts of the world.

Although Under Secretary Warner declined to comment on the substance of the discussions, it was understood that both sides had recognized the right of their navies to operate anywhere on the high seas and thus, implicitly, to keep a watchful eye on each other's activities.

Conceding this mutual freedom of operation, the two delegations were eager, however, to avoid having their naval vessels get into each other's way and risking collisions and other incidents in the course of their surveillance at close quarters.

According to Mr. Warner, the talks with the Soviet delegation, headed by Adm. Vladimir A. Kasatonov, "were restricted to operational and technical measures for improving safety at sea." Both Mr. Warner and Adm. Kasatonov, the first deputy commander of the Soviet Navy, are the second-ranking officials in their respective naval establishments.

Businesslike, Professional
Characterizing the atmosphere of the talks as "businesslike and professional," Mr. Warner said that "both delegations refrained from raising past incidents and concentrated instead on seeking solutions to avoid future incidents."

There have been more than a hundred near collisions and other incidents over the years—some of them unreported—as vessels of the two countries maneuvered dangerously close to one another in efforts to watch each other's naval exercises, inspect new equipment and engage in other intelligence activities.

The negotiators took as their starting point the existing international regulations for preventing collisions at sea, or the Rules of the Road, and sought agree-

Schmidt Says Money Crisis Harms West

Sees Impact on Allies' Defense Policies

FRANKFURT, Oct. 22 (AP)—Defense Minister Helmut Schmidt said today that the Western alliance would be far more productive if it were not burdened by persisting uncertainty about the future of various currencies.

"The monetary crisis as it has developed over the last months is having a severe impact on foreign policy and also on the defense-policy considerations of allied governments," Mr. Schmidt said in a speech prepared for delivery to the German-American Chamber of Commerce here.

He said this was true especially of the relationship between West Germany and the United States.

"I recall, for example, the still pending agreement to help offset U.S. balance-of-payments losses," he said. Mr. Schmidt was referring to the protracted negotiations on offsetting the dollar costs of U.S. troops here on which an agreement expired last June 30.

"The monetary crisis," he said, "clearly demonstrates to all of us that we have not been able to devise together effective instruments with which to control the elements disturbing our cooperation."

"This is all the more unfortunate as the alliance, through decisions taken in 1970 and the spring of 1971 on many important issues, had received a considerable lift and acquired a new sense of solidarity, for example, by the agreement on a European defense improvement program and by the agreement to carry on... (talks) on mutual and balanced force reductions into a more concrete political phase."

The incidents-at-sea talks were first proposed by the United States in 1968, but the Soviet Union displayed interest in such discussions only last November. After preliminary soundings, the two nations agreed early last month to hold the negotiations.

Cairo Reportedly Denies Agreeing To Canal Arbitration

CAIRO, Oct. 22 (UPI)—The Middle East News Agency today quoted an official Egyptian source as denying a Cairo report that said Egypt had agreed to the designation of a top U.S. State Department official as a go-between in efforts to get the Suez Canal reopened.

According to the agency, the source said the dispute was "speculation that has no basis." Remarks attributed to Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad were "not true at all," the source said, according to the agency.

Authoritative diplomatic sources were quoted yesterday as saying Egypt had agreed to the designation of Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs Joseph J. Sisco to be a go-between in efforts for an Egyptian-Israeli interim pact on the Suez Canal.

The UPT dispatch said Egypt had agreed to Mr. Sisco's nomination in talks between Mr. Riad and Secretary of State William P. Rogers in New York earlier this month.

The report said Mr. Riad had suggested Mr. Sisco's talks take place in the United States rather than in the Egyptian and Israeli capitals to save time and avoid publicity.

The State Department in Washington yesterday would neither confirm nor deny the reports.

In his criticism of the arms race, Cardinal Krol stated, "The right to legitimate self-defense, once all means of peaceful settlement have been exhausted, cannot be denied. Peace cannot be invoked to give permanence and respectability to the violation of human rights and human dignity."

He added, however, that the arms race had reached the point where it has become "a plague to all humanity in both developed and developing nations."

"The armaments race violates the rights of the world's poor in a way that is fruitless and intolerable," he continued. "The reason is that it is not the way to protect human life or foster peace, but on the contrary the cause of war are thereby aggravated little by little."

Weathermen
In Tokyo Hit By Heavy Gales

TOKYO, Oct. 22 (AP)—Japanese weathermen, under public criticism for increasing slips-ups in forecasts, have been put on a rating system to check the accuracy of their forecasts.

Koichihiro Takahashi, director-general of the Meteorological Agency, said that under the system, the agency's 22 weather specialists will be given 100 points if a forecast is correct, 50 points if fairly accurate and zero if incorrect. He said the system was not an efficiency rating but an attempt to aim for correct forecasting.

The agency was recently flooded with complaints, including a threat that the agency would be bombed.

UN China Vote To Be Delayed

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 22 (Reuters)—The General Assembly's crucial votes on the admission of China are now likely to be put back a day until at least Tuesday because of the shots fired into the Soviet mission on Wednesday, informed sources said tonight.

The assembly had been expected to complete its general debate on Chinese representation tonight and prepare for voting on Monday. But the uproar caused in the assembly yesterday by the shooting incident has thrown the schedule off and the votes are now likely to be taken on Tuesday.

Because of the interruptions, the list of nearly 80 speeches on the China debate will not be completed until Monday afternoon.

Last night, Britain joined France in firmly opposing the U.S. proposal to seat both China and Taiwan.

General Case Against 29 Black G

Trial at Mannheim Next Week Drops

By John M. Gosh

BONN, Oct. 22 (UPI)—Against 29 black Americans who were to begin standing next week as the result of an incident were unexpectedly missed tonight by the court of the U.S. Army in Germany.

The order by Gen. M. Davidson apparently was to choke off the flood of cases that had surrounded the after allegations of discrimination against blacks in the nation of military justice.

The 195,000-man Seventh main U.S. force in Germany has been increasingly plagued by racial tension during the months. And this case, the so-called "Darmstadt" had started to take on the tones of a cause célèbre Army and its critics.

Other civilian lawyers have become involved on behalf of defendants included the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a former captain who was a military court recently, fully taking part in an anti-demonstration while in duty in Britain.

The case also had led to a dispute between the Army and the press because the courtroom space was inadequate for the number of reporters wanting to trial. The court-martial first six defendants had scheduled to begin next in Mannheim, and Seventh officials had said there room for most of the in planning to cover the process.

Gallup Poll

Negro on Ticket Would Hurt
Presidential Candidate

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

NEWTON, N.J., Oct. 22.—A Gallup poll conducted last week found that a Negro on the ticket would hurt the chances of a presidential candidate.

A total of 1,473 adults, 18 and older, were interviewed for this survey, which was conducted in more than 300 localities throughout the country, Oct. 2-11. This question was asked:

Suppose the presidential candidate of your choice next year picks a Negro as his vice-presidential running mate—would this make you more likely to vote for this ticket or less likely?

Here are the national results and those by key groups:

	More likely	Less likely	No opinion
NATIONAL ...	13	24	57
College ...	13	17	68
High school ...	14	24	56
Grade school ...	13	33	48
Under 30 ...	20	15	60
30-49 ...	14	23	58
50 and older ...	9	30	54
South, whites ...	5	43	48
North, whites ...	13	20	62
Republicans ...	10	26	59
Democrats ...	18	22	58
Independents ...	13	25	56

Another question was asked:

There's always much discussion about the qualifications of presidential candidates—their education, age, race, religion and the like. If your party nominated a generally well-qualified man for president and he happened to be a Negro, would you vote for him?

Here is the trend:

	Yes	No	Op.
1958 ...	38	53	9
1962 ...	47	45	8
1966 ...	59	34	7
1967 ...	54	40	6
1968 ...	67	23	10
1971 ...	70	23	7

Views on voting for a Negro for president follow the same pattern as in the case of the earlier question, with younger persons, the college-educated and those who live outside the South most inclined to hold a liberal viewpoint.

Small Device for Use on Trawlers
Measures Mercury Content of Fish

BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 22 (UPI).—Atomic scientists have developed a suitcase-sized device that can measure mercury contamination in fish aboard a trawler in a minute, the Atomic Radiation Laboratory of the University of California announced yesterday.

The development appears to have considerable potential for the fishing industry, since the test is simple and inexpensive to perform and the equipment will fit easily on boats, laboratory said.

Commercial fishermen have sometimes found after docking that their catches were unmarketable because of mercury contamination.

Dr. Tamas Hadeishi, an atomic physicist, who developed the instrument with chemist Ralph McLaughlin, said a fast, simple test at sea using their atomic absorption spectrometer alleviates the problem.

The testing procedure is to place a sample of fish about the size of a pinhead in the 50-pound measuring device's oven, where it is heated to vapor. The instrument measures any mercury atoms present in the vapor, and the contamination is as a parts-per-billion figure on a simple meter.

By testing a few fish in a school, fishermen could determine if potential catch is below the U.S. Public Health Department's limit of 500 parts of mercury per billion parts of fish.

Dr. Hadeishi said commercial production of the measuring device—which works without the chemical preparation that takes an hour on conventional equipment—should reduce its weight and cost.

Senate, House Conferees Cut
$6 Million Off Arms Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (UPI).—Senate and House conferees yesterday agreed to cut $6 million off the administration's request for the year ending June 30.

But Sen. John Stennis, D., Miss., conference chairman, said he believed the reductions were accomplished without hurting major national security programs.

The Senate, meanwhile, passed by voice vote and sent to the President a companion $2-billion military construction authorization bill. This bill does not cover weapons, but troop housing, shipyards, naval hospitals and other brick-and-mortar items. The total was $200 million under administration requests.

Money saved by the two bills was expected to be eaten up quickly by record pay increases for servicemen scheduled to take effect next month.

The House accepted Senate language confining anti-ballistic missile deployment to the two existing sites located in the North Dakota and Montana Minuteman fields. The purpose of the ABM is to protect the Minuteman from an enemy knockout strike.

The Senate, in exchange for these House concessions, agreed to restore $40.8 million for 13 new Air Force C-130 transports, partly restored $125.1 million it had deleted for new Navy ships and knocked out the $23.7 million it had added for domestic production of the British-manufactured Harrier short-takeoff plane for the Marines.

'There Will Be a Woman' On the Court, Nixon Says

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP).—President Nixon sought today to dispel any disappointment among women's groups that he had not nominated a woman for the Supreme Court. He promised "there will be a woman" on the court, and that "at least we have made a beginning."

He also leveled some criticism at the American Bar Association for its lack of women on the Judicial Committee that investigated some of his proposed nominees.

"When its jury of 12 decides on the qualifications of nominees for the Supreme Court," the President said, "the jury should have at least one woman on it—not all men."

Speaks to GOP Women

The President made his comments before about 3,000 women at the 16th biennial convention of the National Federation of Republican Women.

Mr. Nixon said: "I know a great number in this audience, including my wife, felt very strongly that not only should a woman be considered but that a woman should be appointed. Let me say at least we have had a beginning and there will be a woman on the Supreme Court."

The comment was greeted with a burst of applause.

Two women were among six potential nominees whose names were submitted to the ABA committee. The committee is reported to have considered one of the women, Judge Mildred Lillie of California, but to have found her unqualified.

Mrs. Anne Armstrong, co-chairman of the Republican National Committee, praised the President for considering as possible Supreme Court nominees the two women, Mrs. Lillie and Mrs. Sylvia Bacon of Washington, D.C. Mrs. Armstrong called them "outstanding candidates."

Mrs. Armstrong commented: "Maybe now we'll get busy and get more women in the ABA."

Turning to international affairs, Mr. Nixon cautioned against expectations that his coming visits to Peking and Moscow would solve world problems and automatically guarantee a long era of peace.

The President said he was going

5 Cited in Blasts Of School Buses

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP).—A federal grand jury Wednesday indicted a former grand dragon of the Michigan Ku Klux Klan, Robert E. Miles, 48, of Howell, Mich., and four associates in connection with the bombing of 10 school buses in Pontiac, Mich., in August.

According to the indictment, the five planned to set off explosives in the school bus parking lot on Aug. 30 to prevent the buses from transporting Negro students to schools as ordered by a federal court.

In addition, the indictment said, they planned to fire a mortar into the parking lot soon after Sept. 8 to damage the buses further.

Chairmen Are a Judge and College Dean

Nixon Picks 22 Members of Phase 2 Panels

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UPI).—President Nixon today picked a federal judge and a Texas college dean to head the key panels that will carry out his Phase 2 economic policy. Other panel members also were named.

Presiding over the 15-member Pay Board will be U.S. District Judge George H. Boldt of Seattle. Mr. Nixon selected C. Jackson Grayson Jr., dean of the Southern Methodist University Business School, to head the seven-member Price Commission.

The President told the assembled nominees of the two boards that he wanted them to carry forward the battle against inflation "without institution of massive controls."

"Fair and Just"

Mr. Nixon said, according to a White House spokesman, that their decisions must be "fair and just" and inspire "public support."

If they "rely too much on government sanctions" in acting to keep pay and price increases within reasonable bounds, they will be doomed to fail, the President reportedly told the two members in an informal meeting.

Both boards named today will have critical, complementary roles in the fate of the national economy after the present three-month price-wage freeze expires Nov. 13.

The Pay Board, made up of five members each representing labor, management and the public, are to develop standards for wage increases. The Price Commission, whose total membership is from the public sector, must determine by how much businesses may boost their prices.

Appointment of the five labor representatives on the pay board marked the reluctant agreement of leaders of the nation's biggest labor union to go along with the President's wage hold-down policy. AFL-CIO president George Meany, 77, who had bitterly criticized the Phase 2 policy, is among the labor members.

Also representing labor are four other union presidents, I.W. Abel, 63, of the United Steel Workers; Leonard Woodcock, 60, of the United Automobile Workers; Frank E. Fitzsimmons, 63, of the Teamsters and Floyd E. Smith, 58, of the International Association of Machinists.

Businessmen Named

Representing business were Rocco Siciliano, 49, of Beverly Hills, Calif., president of a Los Angeles holding company and formerly under secretary of commerce; Virgil Day, 56, of Chappaqua, N.Y., vice-president of business environment; J. Robert Bassett, 60, of Chicago, president of Bassett Publishing Co. and Vertical Market, Inc.; Leonard McCollum, 68, of Houston, chairman of Continental Oil Co., and Benjamin F. Blaggini, 58, of San Francisco, president of the Southern Pacific Co.

In addition to Judge Boldt, 57, an Eisenhower appointee to the federal court, public members on the Pay Board are: Arnold R. Weber, 42, who has been executive director of President Nixon's Phase 1 economic policy; Kermit Gordon, 55, budget director and a member of the Council of Economic Advisors in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations and now president of the Brookings Institution here; Neil H. Jacoby, 62, a business and economics professor at the University of California at Los Angeles; and William Caples, 62, president of Kenyon College, Ohio, and former vice-president of Inland Steel Co.

Woman Is Named

Mr. Nixon named a woman, Marina Whitman, 38, professor of economics at the University of Pittsburgh, to the Price Commission. Other members are: William Scranton, 54, president of the National Municipal League and a former governor of Pennsylvania; John William Queenen, 55, of Greenwich, Conn., a recently retired managing partner of an accounting firm; Wilson Newman, 52, of Short Hills, N.J., vice-chairman of the National Bureau of Economic Research; William T. Coleman Jr., 51, partner in a Philadelphia law firm, and Robert F. Lantieri, 50, of Gainesville, Fla., dean of the University of Florida's Business College.

Judge Boldt told newsmen after the announcement that he had never met the President until this morning and has not been active in politics.

Court Supports Nixon War Power

BOSTON, Oct. 23 (UPI).—The U.S. Court of Appeals decided yesterday that the President's conduct of the Indochina war was constitutional, dismissing a suit brought by the state of Massachusetts.

In the unanimous decision written by Judge Frank Coffin, the court upheld dismissal of the suit in U.S. District Court, Massachusetts passed a law last year permitting its citizens to refuse service in Vietnam combat zones because Congress had not specifically declared war.

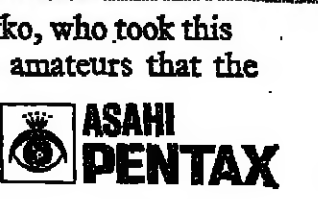

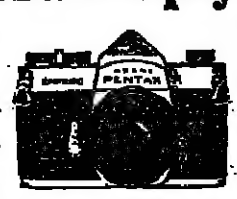

"In the situation of prolonged and undeclared hostilities where the executive continues to act not only in the absence of conflicting claims of congressional authority but with steady congressional support, the Constitution has not been breached," the court said.

Obituaries Adm. Nikolai Y. Basisty Dies; Once Was No.2 in Soviet Navy

MOSCOW, Oct. 22 (NYT).—The death of Adm. Nikolai Y. Basisty, 73, a prominent Soviet naval leader of World War II and the early postwar period, was reported today in the armed forces newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda.

Adm. Basisty rose to high command positions in the Black Sea, where he commanded naval units in several key operations against the Germans in World War II.

He served as commander of the Black Sea Fleet from 1948 to 1951, and then rose to the position of first commander-in-chief of the Soviet Navy, the second-ranking job in the naval hierarchy. He retired in 1960.

Joined Navy at 17
A native of the Ukraine, though of Russian descent, the young Basisty joined the navy in the Black Sea in World War I at the age of 17. He joined the Bolsheviks during the 1917 Revolution and served in the Volga River and Caspian Sea flotillas in the civil war that followed.

Having been graduated from the Naval Academy in 1931, he held various staff posts in Russian fleets of the Black Sea, the Baltic Sea and the Pacific Ocean before going on to higher command training in the General Staff Academy.

As commander of the cruiser Chervona Ukraina (Red Ukraine) after 1938, he took part in the defense of the Black Sea port of Odessa before it fell in 1942 to German forces.

At the peak of his career in the early 1950s, he was made a candidate member of the Communist party's Central Committee and a member of the Supreme Soviet (parliament).

Betty Bronson
PASADENA, Calif., Oct. 22 (NYT).—Betty Bronson, 64, who became a star at 17 when she was chosen by Sir James Barrie for the title role in the silent-film version of his "Peter Pan" in 1924, died here Tuesday.

Miss Bronson, invariably described as "little," was "the queerest, prettiest and most engaging elfin-like little person imaginable. She is 5 feet tall and has a terrible time trying to weigh even 80 pounds," The New York Times once reported. She reportedly won the Peter Pan role against the competition of such Hollywood stars as Lillian Gish and Gloria Swanson.

Born in Trenton, N.J., Miss Bronson appeared briefly in two silent movies, "Anna Ascenda" and "Jara Head," before she was, in the words of the New York

Bulletin, "catapulted among the stars" in August, 1924, with the announcement by Famous Players-Lasky Corp. that the "gray-eyed, dark-haired little sprite" would play "the boy who never grew up."

Miss Bronson's next role was in the screen version of another Barrie play, "A Kiss for Cinderella," in 1925.

For the next six years or so, she appeared frequently, successfully making the transition from elfin to talkies. She had a lead role in Al Jolson's "The Singing Fool."

She was on the screen only once between the early 1930s and 1961, in a 1937 Gene Autry movie. In 1961, she resumed her career as a character actress in both movies and on television.

Lt. Gen. Louis E. Woods
WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (WP).—Retired Marine Lt. Gen. Louis E. Woods, 76, one of Marine aviation's first general officers to direct operations against the Japanese at Guadalcanal, died here Wednesday.

Gen. Woods, a veteran of 34 years' active duty, retired in 1951 while he was commander of aircraft of the Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, and 2d Marine Wing, stationed at Cherry Point, N.C.

After he retired, he served as vice-president of the First National Bank of Quantico. He was stationed in Washington from 1926 to 1933 in the Aviation Section at Marine Corps headquarters. He was here again in 1943 as director of the Aviation Division, before going to the Pacific as commander of the 4th Aircraft Wing.

H.S.M. Burns
NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (NYT).—H.S.M. Burns, 71, president of the Shell Oil Co. from 1947 until his retirement in 1960, died here yesterday.

His full name was Hendry Stuart Mackenzie Burns, but he preferred the initials. Friends called him "Mac."

Mr. Burns was born in Aberdeen, Scotland, and was educated at Aberdeen and Cambridge Universities, receiving two BAs and an MA.

At his death, he was a director of General Dynamics Corp., the Ampex Corp., and the Barber Oil Co. He served as chairman of the board of the American Petroleum Institute and as a trustee of the National Safety Council.

Policeman Killed In Hamburg; Girl Student Arrested

HAMBURG, Oct. 22 (Reuters).—Police today arrested a girl student and sealed off Hamburg to catch other members of a leftist gang after a policeman was killed.

They identified the girl as Margrit Schiller, 23, and said she belonged to the notorious "Baader-Meinhof gang," which has been involved in two recent gun battles with police.

The 33-year-old policeman, father of two children, was shot down in a suburban street early today. Police said a young couple who were with Miss Schiller at the time of the shooting had escaped.

The girl was armed, but her pistol had not been fired recently, police said.

The gang—generally seen here as frustrated political idealists resorting to anarchistic tactics as their last hope of changing society—is made up mostly of students from wealthy families.

Test-Tube Baby Research Draws U.K. Nobel Laureate Warning

CAMBRIDGE, England, Oct. 22 (Reuters).—A British scientist has warned that experiments to create test-tube babies could have horrifying results similar to the tragedy that followed the use of the thalidomide drug.

Dr. Max F. Perutz, of Cambridge University, who shared the Nobel Prize for Chemistry in 1962, said that he agreed with American scientists who have urged a halt to certain experiments in this field because of the possibility of an abnormal baby being born.

The experiments are being carried out in Britain by Dr. Robert Edwards, a Cambridge physiologist, and Dr. Patrick Steptoe, a senior consultant obstetrician and gynecologist.

Dr. Perutz, head of the medical research council's molecular biology department at Cambridge, said one aspect of Dr. Edwards' work—to understand the early development of a human embryo—was ethically and scientifically justified.

But he added: "His second aim was to fertilize ova in the test tube and to reimplant these ova into infertile women, and this involved too great a risk."

Dr. Perutz said he agreed with American scientists, including Dr. James Watson, who shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for Medicine, in their criticism of the experiments at an international symposium of scientists and theologians in Washington last weekend.

Anti-Black Practices Bias in Personnel Policies Cited in U.S. Housing Agency

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (WP).—Since its creation in 1965, the Department of Housing and Urban Development has been guilty of racial discrimination in its employment practices, a federal hearing examiner has ruled.

She found that HUD and its predecessor agencies, such as the Federal Housing Administration, discriminated in hiring, promotion and assignment of its personnel.

These findings now go to HUD's assistant secretary for equal opportunity, Samuel J. Simmons. He will study the hearing record, obtain comments from HUD employees and officials and recommend which—if any—remedial actions should be taken.

Julia P. Cooper, an appeals examiner for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, said illegal discrimination continued at least until October, 1970. She cited practices that, she said:

• Held blacks immobile in the lowest grade levels while whites moved ahead.

• Brought in blacks at the lowest hiring levels in spite of experience or education.

• Neglected to provide, concealed knowledge of or denied training opportunities to blacks.

• Penalized those who might complain of discrimination.

• Permitted white supervisors, either insensitive or antipathetic to blacks, to remain for many years in positions to help maintain these practices.

Miss Cooper said the testimony of 86 witnesses "paints a picture of a waste of human potential that is totally out of focus with the trend of current law."

She said Nixon administration officials admitted that discrimination had existed in the FHA since the 1930s but claimed they had started taking action to remedy it in 1970.

Miss Cooper noted disagreement between HUD officials and black complaints about whether progress had been made since October, 1970, but said that any changes made were brought about as a result of a 1970 civil rights protest within HUD.

But the assertion of Social Services Minister Sir Keith Joseph was immediately countered by a former Labor cabinet minister, Fred Peart, a long-time anti-marketeer, asserted that membership would be a disaster for most British farmers.

As the six-day debate over the terms of British entry droned on in Parliament, the split deepened between those who support and those who oppose the European Economic Community.

Labour Split
Differences were most marked among Harold Wilson's opposition Laborites. Lord Shackleton, the party's leader in the House of Lords, made it known that he intends to vote with Prime Minister Edward Heath's government on Oct. 23.

This is the day when British lawmakers must make their historic choice between accepting or rejecting the principle of entry on terms the Heath government has negotiated.

Yugoslav Kidnapper Nods, Wife Grabs Gun, Drama Ends

TRELLEBORG, Sweden, Oct. 22 (Reuters).—A young man's attempt to abduct his estranged Swedish wife and baby to Yugoslavia ended today when the wife snatched his gun away and threw it to waiting police.

For 20 hours, Ratko Andric, a 37-year-old Yugoslav, had kept a gun loaded with four live rounds trained on his wife, Siv, 25, who was seeking divorce.

He had threatened to shoot unless she provided a car for their journey. It was in the back of a police car, here, that Andric, exhausted, nodded and closed his eyes as he fought off sleep.

Siv grabbed the gun and buried it through the window to the police.

It was all over in a few seconds. Police officers rushed the car and seized Andric, who made no attempt to resist.

Almost Happy

"He was completely exhausted. He seemed almost happy it was all over," a police spokesman said. Niklas, the couple's 14-month-old son, had been taken from the car to be cared for and fed before the family's incident ended.

The kidnapping began yesterday morning in Cerebro, 280 miles north of here, when Andric walked into the clinic where his wife works and thrust a gun at her back.

He said he had flown in from Yugoslavia to take home the child, awarded to the wife's custody by a court.

Police Provide Car

Under threat that he would shoot his wife, police provided a car and driver to collect the baby from foster parents 70 miles away. Andric then demanded to be taken to Stockholm with his family to catch a plane to Yugoslavia. When he was told no pilot would fly a man with a gun, he gave orders to head for the ferry terminal at Trelleborg.

With Andric and his wife in the back, and two unarmed policemen in the front, they drove all night with the baby while Andric held the gun. But officials here said no ferry captain would take Andric on board, and the ferry left without them.

Nine hours of tense pleading and negotiations followed before Andric's drowsiness gave Siv her chance.

Police said the wife was "drained of emotion, but unharmed."

Last Meal

Police said Andric—refused food for 26 hours because he feared it would be drugged—appeared sleepy after being served with a meal two hours before his capture.

The police would not confirm that sedatives had been mixed with the food.

Andric, a welder from a village near Belgrade, came to Sweden six years ago and took a job as a waiter in Cerebro.

He and Siv married in 1969, but the wife sought a divorce last spring. She was awarded custody of Niklas last month.

Santo Domingo Deaths Laid to 6 Policemen

SANTO DOMINGO, Oct. 22 (Reuters).—Police officials said last night that six policemen were responsible for the kidnap-murders of five young men two weeks ago for which a rightist terrorist group was originally blamed.

The youths, aged between 16 and 21, were kidnapped as they left a cultural club and their bodies were found later in various spots within 30 miles of Santo Domingo.

Police sources said that some of them apparently had been tortured before being shot and the rightist terrorist group called La Banda was blamed.

Tito in U.S. Next Week For 6 Days

Nixon Will Discuss
China, Soviet Trips

BELOGRADE, Oct. 22 (UPI).—President Tito will visit the United States next Thursday for an official stay at the invitation of President Nixon, the news agency Tanjug said today.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers, in an interview screened today by Belgrade television, said Mr. Nixon will discuss his forthcoming trips to Peking and Moscow with President Tito. A range of international questions would be raised, he added.

According to a one-paragraph announcement by Tanjug, President Tito and his wife will spend Oct. 28 through Nov. 2 in America, paying a return visit after Mr. Nixon's trip to Yugoslavia last year.

A Yugoslav government spokesman said President Tito's trip "will be an opportunity for an exchange of views and talks on important international questions."

Trip Called Important

Mr. Rogers, interviewed by Verslovs Tadic, a Belgrade Television senior editor, said that President Tito's trip "is going to be very important."

He added, "President Nixon will discuss a majority of main world issues."

Mr. Rogers said, "The President feels that conditions are good now for a discussion with Soviet leaders on a more favorable climate in Europe."

"We will also talk about the prospects for a conference on European security and for a mutual and balanced cut in military forces in Europe," he said.

Envoys in Washington

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (UPI).—Yugoslavia's new ambassador presented his credentials to President Nixon yesterday and predicted that next week's visit by President Tito would be "a decisive step for the further development of cooperation between our two countries."

Ambassador Toma Granfil, 58, said Mr. Nixon's visit to Yugoslavia last year "provided a strong stimulus to the development of our relations."

Agnew, Ending Trip,
Visits the Acropolis

ATHENS, Oct. 22 (UPI).—On the eve of his departure from Greece, Vice-President Spiro Agnew visited the Acropolis for 40 minutes, mostly spent in admiring the Parthenon.

First he stopped for a few moments before the statue of former President Harry S. Truman, in a small square near the uninhabited royal palace. The Vice-President was accompanied by his wife.

He will leave for Washington tomorrow.

Kissinger Takes Trip Outside Peking, Possibly to the Wall

PEKING, Oct. 22 (Reuters).—Henry Kissinger, here to prepare President Nixon's visit, went on an excursion outside Peking today, apparently to look at the Great Wall of China.

After the President's national security adviser and his aides had left, police turned back correspondents at the city boundary and the customary secrecy was observed about what the American party was doing.

The tombs of Chinese emperors of the Ming Dynasty also lie in the direction taken by Mr. Kissinger, on a side road from the route to the wall.

The 2,500-year-old Great Wall would be a natural spot for Mr. Nixon to visit. The Kissinger mission may be carrying out a program which is a dress rehearsal for the Nixon visit.

The Kissinger entourage left its residence early this morning for the trip, traveling northwest past Peking University.

Police stood in the roadway every 100 yards. Soldiers of the People's Liberation Army crouched by roadside bushes and security cars prowled along the route out of the capital.

When the Americans returned tonight, they began more consultations with the Chinese at the Great Hall of the People.

There was no further mention of the American mission today in the Peking press, which yesterday published group photographs of the visitors with Chinese officials.

Mr. Kissinger is due to leave Peking this weekend, although the exact time of his departure has not been announced.

Tonight, when the city was quiet, Mr. Kissinger and members of his mission went shopping. Individually and in groups, the Americans traveled from the state residence where they are staying to the Friendship Store, just off central Peking's main shopping thoroughfare, Wang Fu Jing. The store was opened especially for them.

They rode back to their residence in white Chinese-made Shanghai cars with parcels on their knees.

The store sells fur coats and earmuffs, table tennis sets and books of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's quotations.

Spanish Police End
Sit-In by Scientists

MADRID, Oct. 22 (UPI).—Police early today evicted more than 100 young scientists from the research centers of Spain's Superior Council of Scientific Studies, where they had staged a sit-in to press their demands for Social Security benefits.

The official news agency, Citra, said that officials of the council asked the protesters—postgraduate researchers working on scholarship grants—to end their sit-in. When the request was disregarded, police evicted the researchers and took down their names.

with Soviet agents there, govern- ment sources said today.

The Defense Department, in announcing yesterday the ap- prehension of M/ Sgt. Walter T. Perkins, provided few details beyond the general nature of the charges and his intelligence as- signment at the Air Defense Weapons Center at Tyndall Air Force Base in Florida.

But knowledgeable sources out- side the Pentagon filled in some details today.

Arrested at Pensacola
According to this information, Sgt. Perkins was arrested on Mon- day at the civil air terminal at Pensacola, Fla.

In his possession, the sources said, were an attaché case con- taining documents marked "se- cret," an airline ticket to Mexico City and a note setting up a meet- ing in Mexico City with repre- sentatives of the Soviet Union.

Sgt. Perkins, 36, has been charg- ed with unauthorized possession of classified documents, with falsely swearing that he destroyed certain classified documents and with intent to pass classified material to persons not entitled to receive it.

According to well-placed infor- mants, all the charges relate to material found in the sergeant's possession at the time of his arrest.

The sources said that Sgt. Perkins visited Mexico City within the last several months.

The sources refused to discuss the content of the documents.

The most sensitive secrets available at the sergeant's base, however, carry the highest clas- sification, "top secret." The documents allegedly found in his attaché case at the Pensacola Airport reportedly bore the next lower classification, "secret."

The Air Defense Weapons Center deals with new weapons, tactics and techniques for inter- cepting enemy aircraft, as well as intelligence on the weapons and tactics of potential enemies, including the Soviet Union.

An investigation is under way to determine whether the facts justify a general court-martial of Sgt. Perkins. If a court-martial is convened, he faces a possible maximum sentence of 13 years imprisonment, a dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of pay and allowances.

Intelligence Career
In 19 years of military service, all of Sgt. Perkins' assignments were in the intelligence field, ac- cording to the Pentagon. It declined to specify the titles of previous assignments but would say they were in Japan, Turkey, South Vietnam and the United States.

The sergeant had been in his current assignment, as senior non- commissioned officer at the Intel- ligence Division of the weapons center, since December, 1969.

Sources said that Soviet intel- ligence was believed to maintain its largest single operating base in the Western Hemisphere in Mexico City.

Mr. Newton's recent trip to China was made with "the aid of the State Department" as part of the conspiracy, Mrs. Kathleen Cleaver told a news conference in the Hollywood office of at- torney Luke McKissack.

Cleaver voiced similar views Saturday in Algeria, where he is living in self-exile. Cleaver and Mr. Newton split last year and have since been engaged in a fight for black support.

The beginning of a new annual tradition

SHOWN APPROXIMATELY TWICE ACTUAL SIZE.

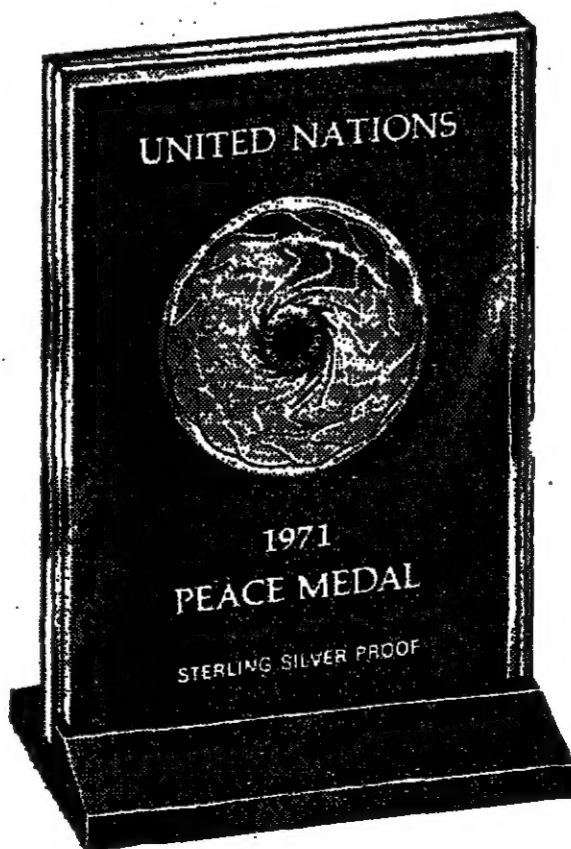

SUNDAY, October 24, is United Nations Day — the international anniversary of the ratification of the United Nations charter.

In the words of Secretary-General U Thant, this medal "will serve to focus world- wide attention on the paramount aim of the United Nations and the heartfelt desire of all mankind — for peace."

In addition to being struck in gold for official presentations, the Peace Medal will be available to the public in silver and in bronze at United Nations headquarters in New York and at the Palais des Nations in Geneva.

PARIS, Oct. 22 (IHT).—A collection of arms and armor, all of high quality, will be sold Monday at the Hôtel Drouot. Some pieces are as good as any in the Armoriale Reale in Madrid or the Vienna Zeughaus. The 55 lots, ranging from the 16th to the 18th centuries, are unparalleled on the European art market.

The collection was formed in the 19th century— from Nov. 29, 1863, through June 23, 1880—and kept intact in the same family to this day although the heirs of the collector prefer to remain anonymous. The auctioneers say simply that it is the collection of I.C.

All the items were obtained through Petit-Prêtre, a shop specializing in "arms, armor and curiosities" at 11 Quai Voltaire, Paris. The very invoices have been preserved.

Petit-Prêtre was Emperor Napoleon III's appointed dealer. The expert of the sale, Robert-Jean Charles, points out that the armor of Louis XIII, now one of the finest exhibits at the Musée de l'Armée in Paris, was acquired by the Empress Eugénie from Petit-Prêtre. That deal was conducted in secrecy since the armor was intended as a present to Emperor Napoleon III. The empress was merely following the example set by the famous collectors of her day: from Richard Wallace, the British manufacturer who built one of the most important collections of the 19th century (eventually bequeathed to a museum now known as the Wallace Collection in London, with masterpieces ranging from Claude Lorraine's landscapes to Richard Bonington's best watercolors and one of Europe's most outstanding collections of arms and armor) to Spitzer, the Viennese-born French collector of medieval and Renaissance art, everybody went to Petit-Prêtre.

But the only collection of arms which has not either gone to museums, and therefore excluded from the market, or been dispersed bit by bit, appears to be the present one. Mr. Charles calls it the "sale of the half-century."

Most of the arms were actually used or worn in their time and some of them had been replaced. One of the quality tests from the collector's point of view is the degree of restoration. The catalogue gives precise details on this factor. The rarest and finest arms in the sale are German. There is a sword with a silvered hilt and two medallions etched on the blade, one representing Gustav II Adolf, king of Sweden, who was killed during the Thirty Years' War at Lutzen in 1632, the other of his aide, Gen. Gustaf-Horn. The best pieces are possibly a couple of German pistols. One of them has a monogram, G.H., which specialists have not been able to identify, and the other a second mysterious mark reading H.F. The owner had his own name engraved on the latter, but it is such a common German name, Braun, that the expert did not try to suggest a precise identity.

A few Spanish swords are a reminder that Spain was the other leading European producer of arms. Whether the prices will be high, as the auctioneers expect, or moderate, they won't be of significance to the art market as a whole because the sale is too exceptional in every way.

This is another instance of an upsurge of interest in highly specialized classes of objects. The interest applies to such fields as model engines, coins and miniatures.

No doubt, dealers and, above all, auctioneers, have contributed largely to this trend. As category after category has dried up, they felt the urge to promote neglected—or so it seemed to them—fields. Christie's, for example, opened the new season with a sale devoted to "Aeronautics and Motoring" (Sept. 30), culminating in the sale of a "Blériot monoplane, type XI, series No. 228—the cross-channel type." A sale at Sotheby's on Oct. 7 consisted of "important military and naval campaign medals." Ballet costumes, never seen at auction before 1960, are now an accepted and successful feature of the market.

As one explanation of the appearance of these new categories in the auction room, I would put forward the idea of the gradual weakening of the idea of "art." The general public may not be affected by avant-garde trends; it may even be hostile. But somehow the solid definitions of yesterday may have been diluted. If cans dumped into a dark corner make a work of art, why not ballet costumes, coins and arms?

Entertainment in New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—This is how critics for The New York Times rate new stage productions:

"The Master Builder," Henrik Ibsen's play about a successful failure. Solness, the master builder of a small Norwegian town, has been staged by Gene Felt, using the new Michael Meyer translation. "Solness comes off triumphantly the better," writes Olive Barnes about the new production. "Paul Sparer's Solness has a sad and haunted look to him. He is made into a man of illusory strength and pained fears. Every Ibsen actor must look to the past, and Mr. Sparer's gray and hollow cheeks, his bluster and thin crust of self-confidence all convey an alienation with life and a dissatisfaction with wasted years. In places Mr. Sparer is almost consciously stagey, but then I suspect so would have been Solness." Jill O'Hara's Hilde, said

Barnes, was "attractive and shinningly youthful, yet without that special fire needed to take a girl into a man's house and carry him off as a childhood trophy." However, the evening as a whole left a "true impression of Ibsen, and the staging is honest and faithful. This company is fulfilling a true need in New York simply by giving plain, unvarnished productions of plays that are part of our theatrical heritage."

LONDON THEATER

Middle-Aged Domestic Trivia

By John Walker

LONDON, Oct. 22 (IHT).—My heart does not bleed for the middle-aged unsatisfied success, for those who have settled themselves into a comfortable rut, yet remain aggrieved at their own complacency. Alan Bennett, though, appears to think that such are in need of comfort and provides it with his cozy comedy "Getting On" at the Queen's Theatre.

His middle-aged and irretrievably middle-class hero is George Oliver, a Labor MP of Conservative opinions who lives in one of London's trendier districts although he represents a grimy Midlands constituency. He is dissatisfied but doesn't know why. He doesn't like motorways with their predictable cafés serving the same dull food. He has a youngish wife, his second, and a teenage son he doesn't understand. His social passion is aroused only by a neighbor's dog which fouls his doorstep.

He limits his protest to discarding the more fashionable books—on Zen and suchlike—that his wife brings into the house. He has the politician's habit of categorizing people rather than regarding them as individuals. Thus, he classifies his son as a hippie until, discovering that the boy is still a virgin, he brands him as "one of the new puritans."

He does not notice that his wife, out of the same boredom, is having a casual affair with a young odd-job man, whom she shares with a family friend, a Tory MP who does not seem to have any opinions at all. Mr. Bennett details lovingly this domestic trivia, in the obvious expectation that his audience will identify with George, especially as played by Kenneth More in his most ingratiating manner. Like John Osborne in "West of Suzie," Mr. Bennett is ambivalent about the older generation and manifestly unfair to the younger. He allows his young to be more articulate than Osborne's revolutionary, but still sets them up as a punch-bag for middle-aged resentment. There is a good deal of humor and plenty of witty lines ("I had a good education. It never went to my head somehow"). But it is the humor of reassurance that all is right with the world. Mona Washbourne, as a dotty mother-in-law, effortlessly sets the audience laughing and there is a brittle, but of course sympathetic, performance from Gemma Jones as the frustrated wife.

At Her Majesty's Theatre, Henry James's bulky novel "The Ambassadors" has been wittily turned into the singular "Ambassador"—singular as a musical that has nothing to delight the eye or ear. Don't Etklinger has reduced the book to tepid cliché, ably assisted by the music of Don Gorman and Peter Rice's sets.

Howard Keel, with his rich, strong voice, struggles to inject a little life into this thin tale of a punctilious Massachusetts lawyer who goes to Paris to rescue a young man from the clutches of an older woman and discovers how to be happy. Danielle Darrieux, making her English stage debut, sparkles as best she can as the object of his middle-aged fantasies. Stone Wilkey, the director, keeps the action flowing admirably, as if past to come the evening's sedition. You have to admit to Court's belligerence on its writers. At the end of a series of advertisements castigating critics like Edward Bond's "At the Court's Theatre there is their third pig." "AC/DC." He's brilliant, play the first explain and explore a nation's shift in sensibility.

Other new plays in "Exiles" by James Joyce at the Aldwych. A much welcome revival of Pinter's superb production of a masterly performance by John Wood. "Slip Road Wedding" Terson at the Strand. Strange and powerful on Lorca's "Blood." About the survival of rural violence in a modern industrial society.

Talking About Years chisel Mac Lannan at of York's. A one-man which, for once, Mr. M. noir embarks rather than his subject.

On the Arts Agenda

Peter Glosop will sing the title-role of "Falstaff" for the first time in London Oct. 29 in a revival of the Verdi opera at the Royal Opera House with Aldo Ceccato conducting. Debra Bryn-Jones sings Ford and Elizabeth Vaughan, Elizabeth Robson, Joan Davies and Regina Romik the leading female parts. On Nov. 11, Covent Garden revives its 1969 production of "Der Rosenkavalier" with Senta Jurinac again singing the Marcelline and Michael Langdon, Baron Ochs. Brigitte Fassbender makes her British debut as Octavian, sharing the role with Tatiana Troyanos, and Lucia Popp sings Sophie. Josef Krips will conduct.

David Oistrakh, who helped open the season of the French Radio's National Orchestra Oct. 20 as soloist in the first French performance of Shostakovich's Second Violin Concerto, under Jean Martinon, conducts the orchestra Oct. 27 at the Théâtre des Champs-Élysées, with Igor as soloist in the Violin Concerto.

The season's first to go on at the Zurich Opera, four choreographic ballet director, Michel Meyer, three of them to contemporary composers: Choreographiques (Ophelies) (Kellerborn), De rois de Bartok's "The Cuckoo" (Kellerborn), and work on the program.

"Ashmedai," a new Israeli composer commissioned by the State Opera, will have performance there Nov. 10. The musical directions: Berlin, with Leopold staging and Zbyněk Holý rigger. Vladimir Ryzhik Melchior and Inge Bo the cast.

Inflation Rate, Price Index Ease

NP Growth Rate Declines in U.S.

By Fred Farris
WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (NYT).—The nation's economy is slowing down, with smaller third-quarter increases reported in the national product and the living index, as well as the price index.

GNP—the value of U.S. goods and services produced—rose $16 billion in the July-September period, compared with $3 billion growth rate in the second quarter this year.

The Commerce Department said its figures showed the rate of output reached a 3.3 percent annual rate in the third quarter, down from 3.8 percent in the second quarter.

Some prices coming under the freeze rose in last month's index, with the government attributing this to two factors: Permitted "seasonal" hikes for such things as clothing, and a delayed report of previous increases, such as the rise in school tuition.

The department said consumer prices had been going up in the past three months at an annual rate of 3.3 percent, the second lowest quarterly advance in the last four years. There was a 2.8 percent increase in the first three months of this year, when mortgage interest rates were declining, and a 3.3 percent annual increase for the second quarter.

Orders Decrease
WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP).—September's new orders for durable goods fell 3.8 percent, or $1.5 billion, to $30.5 billion, the Commerce Department reported.

September shipments of durable goods fell 0.5 percent, or $200 million, to $31.3 billion. Unfilled orders fell $800 million, or 1 percent, to $74.1 billion.

The department said more than half of the drop in new orders was attributable to the aerospace industry, which fell $700 million to $1.3 billion.

Friedman's Money Theory Misses Target This Year

By Alfred L. Malabar
NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP-DJ).—Milton Friedman is alive and well and living in Vermont. And some of his disciples on Wall Street probably wish they were there too.

This has not exactly been their year.

Friedmanites are a particular breed of economists, led by the diminutive Mr. Friedman, who teaches at the University of Chicago and gets away from it all at a mountain-top retreat in New York.

Friedmanites believe that money matters most in economic affairs. If you want to know what is going to happen in the general economy, and on Wall Street, the thing to keep your eye on, they say, is the nation's money supply.

If it grows very rapidly, say above 6 or 7 percent a year, look out for boom and inflation ahead. If it grows too slowly, say less than 2 or 3 percent a year, or if it declines, look out for a recession or worse.

Until this year things went well for Friedmanite forecasters here. By keeping a close tab on the movements of the money supply, they correctly forecast the onset of a major recession in late 1969 (as well as a decline in most share prices). And, again scrutinizing monetary statistics, they correctly forecast the beginning of an economic recovery in late 1970 (as well as last year's rebound in share prices).

But 1971 has been a different story. During the first half, the money supply expanded at an annual rate of more than 10 percent, a rise that convinced most Friedmanites that a surge in business activity impended.

Instead, the economy has continued to recover only sluggishly from the 1969-70 recession. And most share prices while well above their lowpoints of last year, have failed to show sustained strength. Altogether, the improvement has fallen far short of what most Friedmanites, with eyes glued to this year's big monetary growth, had expected.

Soviet Growth Rate Drops

MOSCOW, Oct. 22 (AP).—The growth rate of the Soviet economy for the first nine months of the year was reported today as 8 percent, down from 8.5 percent for the first three quarters of 1970.

The official figures reported by the Central Statistical Board show the growth rate down from the 8.5 percent pace at mid-year.

The new report showed the Ministry for Automation as the nation's fastest growing sector, at a rate of 21 percent over last year, a rate that equaled 1970 growth. This reveals Soviet concern to computers and automation production.

Of the major ministries listed, Fisheries made the poorest showing with an increase of only .05 percent. Fish production for food showed a drop of 4 percent.

Car Output Up
Automobile production was up 54 percent to 374,400 cars in the first nine months of the year, compared with 243,000 cars in the like period of 1970.

The figure reflects the boost given Soviet auto production by the Russian version of the Fiat Truck production was up 9 percent with 423,300 units, compared with the 388,000 trucks made in the first nine months of 1970.

Some of the worst performances were noted in such consumer goods as washing machines, television sets and soap. Production of washing machines was down 20 percent from last year with 3.3 million units made. TV sets were down 15 percent with 4.4 million sets produced compared to 5.1 million in the like period of 1970. Soap production was off 14 percent at 115,000 tons.

The report said that compared with the first nine months of last year the output of electricity increased by 46 billion kilowatt hours, the output of oil was up 17 million tons to 276 million tons and steel production increased 3.7 million tons to 89.9 million tons.

U.S. Firms Improve Their Cash Position

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP-DJ).—The cash position of U.S. companies has improved greatly since the financial collapse of Penn Central Transportation Co.

When the Penn Central Co.'s railroad unit entered reorganization less than 18 months ago, business analysts were wondering whether this liquidity crisis would be the first in a series of major bankruptcies in the United States.

Many corporations are still low on cash, but the general outlook is now much brighter.

John Gorman, an economist at the Commerce Department, voices the opinion of many analysts in and out of government. "The fact hasn't received much attention, but we have witnessed a vast improvement in the financial positions of corporations during the past year or so," he says. "I regard this as a very healthy development."

Officials See Agreement on Atlantic Fares

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (NYT).—Knut Hammarstrand, director-general of the International Air Transport Association (IATA), predicted yesterday that transatlantic airlines would reach agreement on new fares next week and avert a threatened price war from Feb. 1.

Similar optimism was expressed before a Senate subcommittee hearing by Najeeb E. Halaby, the president of Pan American World Airways, and Charles C. Tillinghast Jr., the chairman of Trans World Airlines.

Mr. Tillinghast asserted that Pan Am and TWA would suffer heavy losses and would have to seek federal aid if the low fares proposed by Lufthansa, a German airline, were put into effect for long. Lufthansa has vowed to raise fares if agreement is not reached by the IATA.

Big Board Prices Fall After Show of Strength

By Vartan G. Vartan
NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (NYT).—The stock market's bulging bag of worries proved too much again today for prices, snuffing out a technical rally that got under way at the opening bell.

"This market is weak in the knees again," declared one Wall Street analyst watching the tape shortly before the close.

The Dow Jones industrial average slipped 2.48 to end at 863.57, thereby marking its eighth straight decline. For the entire week, the indicator plunged 23.1 points and carried prices back to levels prior to the "Nixon rally" starting in mid-August.

Taking a longer backward view, the Dow has retreated to where it stood in the second half of 1964.

Today's action was comparatively quiet, with volume running at 14.56 million shares, and advances actually showing a slight edge over declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

But the morning bounce—the Dow was up more than 4 points at 11 a.m.—proved only a temporary recovery in a market that has most investors confused, befuddled and intensely skeptical.

SEC Seen Aiding Reorganization of Stock Market

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (Reuters).—Securities and Exchange Commission member James J. Neenan said today commission intervention may be needed to spur lagging New York Stock Exchange efforts to achieve a centralized national market system.

During a commission hearing on the reorganization of the securities market, he said: "I have serious reservations that the New York Stock Exchange can be a cohesive force in achieving a centralized market system."

NYSE president Robert Haack told the hearing that as a result of September meetings with representatives of other exchanges "we now have the beginnings of an outline of how a centralized system would look."

Mr. Neenan said this outline should be submitted to the commission.

"I think that the matter is of such urgency that we must have evidence that it can be left in the hands of the private sector," he said.

Reaction to Bad News
American Standard, the biggest percentage loser of any issue on the Big Board, graphically demonstrated what analysts called the market's "current hyper-sensitivity to any adverse news."

The common stock of American Standard, best known for its plumbing and related equipment, plunged 5 1/4 to 15 5/8, while the convertible preferred stock tumbled 3 3/4 to 89 3/4.

This followed a report of sharply lower profits for the third quarter, as well as the disclosure that American Standard plans to sell off an estimated $50 million of assets as part of a program to improve earnings.

Granite Airways, the volume leader, gained 3 3/8 to 15 1/8. Pan American World Airways, which has reported higher profits for the latest quarter, rose 1/4 to 11 5/8 in active trading. However, both Eastern Air Lines and Northwest Airlines dipped 1/4 to the active market.

It was a market that even saw the stockbrokers' stocks under pressure. Merrill Lynch, currently underwriting an advertising campaign stressing its bullishness on America, eased 3/8 to 33 1/8 and closed within a fraction of its low since being listed on the exchange as the first brokerage concern.

Bache & Co. shares were trading around $12 a share, or slightly less, in the over-the-counter market during the afternoon. Bache went public with a big offering in mid-September at a price of $18 a share.

American Stock Exchange prices were mixed, the exchange's index closing unchanged at 34.65. Declining issues led advances 436 to 401, with 296 closing unchanged.

Loew's Theatre warrants were the exchange's most active issue, rising 1 7/8 to 23 on volume of 87,000 shares.

Figures for Shipments Of Appliances Revised

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (Reuters).—The Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers today sharply revised figures issued earlier on September home appliance factory unit shipments.

Total shipments for the month, earlier reported as up 15 percent for September, were corrected to an increase of 3 percent.

When KAB first recommended LEASCO CORP. last year below $10, the bad news which was generating panicky public liquidation of many such issues involved the great liquidity crisis of 1970. After the stock had subsequently climbed to above $26, another crisis was precipitated just over a week ago, as it was announced that American accountants were studying ways of tightening rules governing leasing transactions. LEASCO fell four points immediately and general anxiety spread to many industries which either make extensive use of leased equipment or supply it to others on a leased basis.

Finding the Profit Factor in Bad News

When KAB first recommended LEASCO CORP. last year below $10, the bad news which was generating panicky public liquidation of many such issues involved the great liquidity crisis of 1970. After the stock had subsequently climbed to above $26, another crisis was precipitated just over a week ago, as it was announced that American accountants were studying ways of tightening rules governing leasing transactions. LEASCO fell four points immediately and general anxiety spread to many industries which either make extensive use of leased equipment or supply it to others on a leased basis.

Will Some Rebound Movements Generate Gains of up to 100%

The weekly KAB reports have recently been explaining why public alarm in many sectors actually is creating opportunities to speculate with a minimum of risk at a time when growth possibilities are enormous. The theory here is simply that massed emotional selling swiftly reduces prices to levels where informed professionals are willing to accumulate; and now that leasing stocks have joined the shakeout KAB finds some at levels down to $10 and below which promise to perform as potentially over the year ahead as LEASCO itself has since its 1970 lows were established.

Art Buchwald

Dangerous Honor

WASHINGTON.—The worst thing that can happen to any public official in this country is to be mentioned for a top appointment in the government, and not get it.

It isn't just the rejection of the job that is hard to swallow—it is that while he is under consideration, the candidate is being subjected to exhaustive investigation by every one from the FBI to the Harvard Law Review, and his reputation can be destroyed forever.

Buchwald

The recent Supreme Court nomination of Judge Clamchowder Nixon put on a perfect example of how dangerous it is to be mentioned for one of the highest positions in the land.

Take the case of Judge Clamchowder. Judge Clamchowder, who had been appointed to the Fifth Circuit Traffic Court for the work he had done in carrying Tornado County for President Nixon in 1968, found himself listed as one of the "leading" candidates for a Supreme Court seat.

Judge Clamchowder told me in his chambers, "I knew they had just thrown in my name as a smokescreen and at first I was flattered to get my name in the newspapers."

"But then the Eastern Establishment press started coming down here and asking about me, and my life has become pure hell."

$775,000 Paid

For a Rousseau

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP).—A painting by French artist Henri Rousseau was sold last night at Parke-Bernet Galleries in New York for what is said to be the highest auction price ever paid for a 20th-century painting—$775,000.

It was sold by Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, widow of the publisher of the Chicago Tribune, to Norton Simon, the Los Angeles industrialist.

Parke-Bernet said that this work, done by Rousseau in 1910, was the last of the artist's jungle scenes not in a museum.

An Alphabet Of Ghosts In Britain

LONDON (HRT).—Only a week to Halloween, but there's still time to plan a visit to a ghost, thanks to Peter Underwood's brand-new "Gazetteer of British Ghosts," an illustrated guide to 236 Haunted Sites (Souvenir Press, London).

With understandable excitement the publishers point out that this is the first time the ghosts of Britain have been catalogued and placed in alphabetical order, from Abbotford in Scotland, where Sir Walter Scott complained in 1818 "of a violent noise, like drawing heavy boards along the new part of the house," to Woburn Abbey, where "an annoyingly persistent manifestation" caused the Duke of Bedford to move the site of his stately television room.

Not all sites listed in the book are open to the public, so Mr. Underwood provides ghost hunters with the names of nearby hotels. But at least one hotel, in Hoylake, Cheshire, is itself haunted: "The 32 bedroom Royal Hotel, facing the Irish Sea and built in 1797, has an unidentified ghost in tweeds."

The listings include the most haunted house in England (Surrey Rectory, on the borders of Essex and Suffolk, built in 1883 and destroyed by fire in 1939), and what the late architect Sir Edward Lutyens called the "most interesting haunted house in Sussex (Breda Place, near Rye, whose chapel and adjoining rooms are 'particularly haunted'). The Duke of Norfolk's Arundel Castle should also get marks for variety. It has four ghosts: a girl, a boy, a dandy, and a white bird.

In his preface Peter Underwood notes that "there are more ghosts seen, reported and accepted in the British Isles than anywhere else on earth," a circumstance he unfortunately cannot satisfactorily explain. He does add that many of the haunted houses were occupied by adolescent children or by a dominating mother or a woman who is unhappy or frightened. An interesting proportion of hauntings further occurs in rectories or in inns after dinner.

The ghosts listed present a wide variety of backgrounds—criminals, saints, murderers and murderers, gull or innocence being, so to speak, immaterial. Many ghosts are ill-treated former domestic help, indicating that in haunted houses the problem is not to get servants but to get rid of them (the queen mother has, for example, at Glamis Castle, a long-dead, badly-treated page boy who persists in sitting by the door of her sitting room).

There are ghostly nuns (one, The Black Nun, haunts the Bank of England in Threadneedle Street), a killed Jacobite ghost who gazes at a portrait of Bonnie Prince Charlie and Flora MacDonald, spectral doctors, goblins, something like a hager but without a head, a cylindrical form like a glass tube, a severed arm, a cowled monk-like figure, a beautiful vampire and a phantom King Charles spaniel, to say nothing of a lady who rides about Sussex on a milk-white ass.

There are those who come to terms with their ghosts. "Now John, that's childish," says the tenant of Penkese Castle in Scotland, who tells the apparition of Sir John Cockburn, who ever he got out of hand, and Mrs. James Pullen of Essex showed no alarm at being haunted by a Roman centurion. "Those old Romans do you no harm," she said.

Not everyone takes it as well. Mr. B. Key, reasoning that the ghosts about his home, Woodfield in Bedfordshire, had lowered the property values, asked for his taxes to be reduced. He was refused. Lady Hildyard, living in a grace and favor apartment in Hampton Court, wrote to the Lord Chamberlain about two ghostly male figures and also complained about unaccountable rappings and other strange noises at night-time. Her letter was passed to the Board of Works, who did nothing.

It isn't only stately homes and castles that are haunted. An old fire station in Essex has a ghostly fireman, complete with brass helmet, and Jockey Fred Archer haunts the Newmarket racetrack mounted on his favorite gray horse. There are haunted cinemas and theaters (Drury Lane in London has two ghosts—one of whom plays the matinee, and the other the evening performance), and a semi-detached house in Gloucestershire had rhythmic tapping, mysterious pools of water, and strange writing on its walls. A council house in Lincolnshire "was so badly haunted that Mr. Ted Barnham, his wife and family left the place in September, 1967 after a 'ghost' appeared on closed-circuit television at the house."

There are lots of celebrity ghosts in the book. From Queen Elizabeth, who haunts the Royal Library of Windsor Castle, to H. G. Wells, who haunts his former home in Hampstead, Archbishop Land, never a frivolous man, oddly rolls his head across the floor of the library of Merton College, Oxford, and Thomas à Becket has been seen at Hastings, Sussex. Most of the wives of Henry VIII have been spotted and Sir Francis Drake has been seen at Dartmoor. Unexplained footsteps have been heard at the Old Vicarage, Cranbury, immortalized by Rupert Brooke and as Dorchester, Dorset, says Mr. Underwood, "the ghostly form of Lawrence of Arabia has been seen and the roar of a powerful motorcycle has been heard at dead of night."

Of particular interest to author Underwood is Sarat, near Rickmansworth, Hertfordshire, which was once occupied by his maternal grandparents and which was "the scene of the first ghost story I ever heard." Since then Mr. Underwood has become president of the Ghost Club (founded in 1863) and, says the publisher's blurb, has probably heard more first-hand ghost stories than any man alive. He took part in the first official investigation into a haunting, is a book reviewer, and recently completed a biography of Boris Karloff.

PEOPLE: Notes

From the Far Side

"Don't get me wrong," writes Michael Barnett, of London, "but some of my best friends are Greek. What's more, they live in Patchoque, Long Island. In any event, we must have followed each other to Corfu by a couple of weeks. I read your pieces there, and oddly, nothing has changed, except maybe us: in three weeks we switched homes twice and rooms five times... Your item on the Ta Dikta menu brought to mind a couple of specimens, translucent eyeballs of olive oil and mounds of mousaka comprise. For one thing, some little taverna in Kassiopi offered for dessert 'fres fruits,' under which was listed 'pitres' (how free can you get?) But the bit that really leaves a lump in the throat is the 'bee steak.' I took the feta. Withal, I'd like a return match. There are at least two mountains my rented car didn't break down on and I think they should have a rematch. But don't get me wrong..."

"To the President too, beginning to lose his well-known objectivity," asks David Inca, of Vevey, Switzerland, who cites an article in the Oct. 3 DET as evidence: "President Nixon relaxed in the Bahamas sun today and clung to a hope that Pest Coast dock workers would end their strike... Well, there goes California."

Ad Libs (continued): "About that ad in your paper for the Atlantic Monthly," writes Jon Darby, of Helsinki, "to wit: 'For some time we've had complaints from Americans living abroad, European friends, expatriates and extended travelers who could not find the Atlantic at their newsdealer... We'll mail the Atlantic to you every month for the next 12 months.' Tell them thanks anyway, but I'm still a patriot."

"The Gold-Star-on-the-Forehead for Truth in Advertising has got to go to Europelec," writes Peter Allen, of Athens, "for the best confession that 'With the help of the telephone's swift communication plus the efficiency of the written mess. Don't wait. Contact us.' O.K., but you'll be sorry."

"The Oct. 8 edition of Guidepost," writes Jan Montero, of Madrid, "now offers the ultimate in bachelor pads in my hometown: ROSALES, directly across town apartment, 2 1/2 rooms, sunnynapp, quiet, furnished, near airport and 2 bedrooms."

A letter to the editor of "The Bulletin of Brussels, courtesy of A. Fowler, reads: 'I understand that according to Belgian law, a wife cannot open an independent bank account without authorization from her husband, and she has an account accordingly, she has the right to draw on it without her permission... Where Women's Lib? They had better discard their brasserie habit, acquiring the elementary right of having an independent bank account. Where else did they hide their cash in this trouble? (Signed) A. MALE.' Come now, Merc, were they could relocate in a lingerie?'

The House

CADEROUSSE, France, Oct. 22 (UPI).—Claudine Ross stepped out and slammed the front door. Just a little hard, though, police said.

She was only two steps away from it when the entire house collapsed, leaving her standing like a character in Buster Keaton movie in the middle of a pile of rubble.

Police said that the house main beam apparently was rotten.
